If one record has ever been the foundation stone of the latest era of Barcelona sound, it has probably been "Aina". The first full-length recorded by the band in 1999 showed, almost for the first time, that a spanish band could sound as good as any american or english one. Because of a special talent showed by four musicians in one of their creative and interpretative peaks. Recorded in France, at Pole Nord studios by Fred Norguet, it was a true and successful attempt to bring things further in the spanish scene. Half decade of experience allowed the band to sound tighter as never before; and inspiration came, trough the well-learned Jawbox lessons, in a bunch of songs that still sound addictive, classical and fresh at the same time: "Mnemotechnics", the best Aina song ever for many, "Central pages", "Test drive", "Thunderbird" or the almighty "Dark black night" are true masterpieces in the history of Barcelona scene. The shows with Bluetip, Kerosene 454, Chokebore, Nada surf, Burning heads, The Sorts or The Capital City Dusters made the rolling snowball get bigger, leading the band into a status of first-line independent band. One of the best spanish rock albums ever, the atmosphere and magic of this record still make us shake. And will make you too.
