Selling Points:

- Second album after "Regresan de la Tumba" (BCore, 06)

- Produced by Victor and Santi Garcia at Ultramarinos Costa Brava studios, Sant Feliu de Guíxols.

- For lovers of surf, surf and surf, from Dick Dale to The Ventures and through Los Straitjackets.

Three years after releasing their debut album, Los Tiki Phantoms tune their instruments and get ready for their new attack plan. These four generals of the almighty Great God Tiki get forward without a quarter with their second instrumental album, more danceable, more mature and richer in composition. Recorded and mixed at Ultramarinos Costa Brava Studios by Victor and Santi Garcia brothers, "El Ejército de las Calaveras" shows us a direct band, solid and tight, hungry for power, far from conventions and labels, without betraying their own particular sound. The crystal reverb, the party-time melodies, martial strength and unlimited fun are the pillars of their conquest plans. They already proved it on their debut "Regresan de la Tumba", with critical acclaim that put them on the top of Spanish Surf-rock scene, thanks to their melodic skills and their onstage performances. This band is fun-guaranteed, and so their army of fans follow them everytime the Great God Tiki shows up. Without having stopped playing live since the first day, they're getting ready for their second assault, turning the reverb up, squeezing their amps' tubes and making us dance under serious threat of divine punishment. You're warned...
