Selling Points:

- Second piece of work by this trio formed by three of the most restless musicians in Valencia, on their curriculum you'll find bands like Estrategía Lo Capto, La Orquesta del Caballo Ganador, Zener, Mentat, Los Masticantes, Balano, Ciudadano, Rastrejo....

-Their natural environment is on stage, they've already been on three european tours and continuously tour Spain, taking part in festivals like the Primavera Sound, Tanned Tin or Sant Feliu Sota Zero.

-The energy and attitude of punk, the punch and discomfort of noise-rock and the intense groove of funk.

To dance with a bit of punch is ok, but to punch while your dancing is quite cool too, and Betunizer can prove it. Betunizer are here to show us how to work their noise, their groove and their euphoric bad temper. Here's BOOGALIZER (Bcore, 2012) and the name already gives us a hint of what we'll get.

Betunizer need more time, they see your time and double it. They know that the end of the world is near and because of this in just two years they have played more than 100 concerts, three European tours and now, they bring to us their second studio album, recorded yet again with Santi Garcia in the Ultramarinos Costa Brava Studios. And hold on, they already have enough material for a third one.

Boogalizer is a snapshot of this frenetic rhythm, a photo finish so you can see how well they've beaten you up without you even realizing. If their first album "Quién nace para morir ahorcado, nunca moriará ahogado" (BCore 2010) was a punch in the face, this time, Betunizer open up their fists and smack you in the face with their hand wide open. It's a more rhythmic smack with a larger sound. It hurts the same like Street Fighter II's E.Honda's attack of a thousand palms.

Boogalizer will be in the shops from march on and Betunizer will present it through Europe to show us what would have happened if Howlin' Wolf had been born in Jaén, if Claypool did math classes or if Tito Puente played with Insane.

Betunizer are Jose Guererro (guitar and vocals), Pablo Peiró (bass guitar) and Marcos Junquera (drums). They come from Valencia, a city with no laws, where the corrupt are honoured with statues and where the best concert hall is a squat in the Zona Franca. They'll soon be in your city. And its gonna do you well.
